Stress incontinence is that little leak that happens when you cough, laugh, sneeze -- any motion that stresses the bladder. Stress incontinence can result from pregnancy and childbirth, when pelvic muscles and tissues can get stretched and damaged. It can also occur from high-impact sports, as a result of aging, or from being overweight.

Urinary tract infections arise from one type of bacteria, Escherichia coli (E. coli), which normally lives in the colon. In most cases, bacteria first begin growing in the urethra. An infection limited to the urethra is called urethritis. From there bacteria often move on to the bladder, causing a bladder infection (cystitis). If the infection is not treated promptly, bacteria may then go up the ureters to infect the kidneys (pyelonephritis).

Urinary incontinence in women may be made worse by:

- Medications that increase urine production, such as diuretics, or those that relax the bladder, such as bronchodilators.
- Caffeinated beverages, such as coffee, tea, or some soda pop.
- Smoking, which is often the start of a chronic cough and subsequent incontinence.

Pop-On® Self-adhering Catheter

The Pop-On self-adhering male external catheter has a shorter sheath with the same adhesive area as a normal length catheter. The 1.5" sheath works especially well with a short or retracted penis. The non-sensitizing adhesive provides a reliable bond to the skin for extra confidence and maximum wear time. All-silicone material is 100% latex-free, clear and breathable.

Incontinence may occur for only a short time (acute) or it may be an ongoing (chronic) problem. Generally, incontinence usually clears up when the underlying problem, such as a urinary tract infection, is treated successfully. Depending on the cause, treatment may cure chronic incontinence. If the condition cannot be completely cured, it usually can be managed to limit its effect on a person's daily life.

Self-Cath® Plus Hydrophilic Coated Catheter—Sterile
This straight tipped intermittent catheter has a hydrophilic coating that activates immediately upon exposure to water - for fast, clean, lubrication and maximum ease of use. The Self-Cath® Plus has a unique, uncoated, GripZone™ area for total control in handling. Flexible, medical grade PVC with smooth, fire polished eyes. Single use, latex-free.

have urinary incontinence. It's most common in people over 50 years old, especially women. But it can also affect younger people, especially women who have just given birth. Urinary incontinence can be caused by many different medical problems, including weak pelvic muscles or diabetes.

Overflow incontinence. If you can't empty your bladder every time you go to the bathroom and experience a frequent or constant dribbling of urine, you have overflow incontinence. Certain medications can cause this problem, and people with nerve damage from diabetes or men with prostate issues can also experience this type of incontinence.

Positioning products help relieve pressure.
There are many new positioning products in our Durable Medical Equipment Section.
